FOREWORD

SPORTSMANSHIP, as it occurs on the athletic field, is a thing familiar to most Americans. The concept of sportsmanship, however, reaches far beyond the athletic field. It is an ideal which each new generation must learn to cherish, for it is the essence of democracy. It means fair play for all with whom we deal in our day to day living; it means respect for the rules wherever we are and in whatever activity we are engaged; it means honesty, the basic ingredient; it means always giving your best, and it means a graceful acceptance of the results, whatever they may be.

Today, the people of the world have come to realize that this ideal is a principle which may be used as a guide for enduring world relations. For rivalry is but one ingredient of sportsmanship, but what sportsmanship teaches us is far more important.

To the Members of the Class of 1956
Port Jervis High School
Port Jervis, New York

To the members of the Class of 1956 go our heartiest congratulations on the completion of your high school courses of study. I am sure that you realize by now how brief your stay with us has been. It is our hope that it has been not only a happy and enjoyable one but a most worthwhile one as well. Each year we approach Commencement with mixed feelings because we regret to see you leave and at the same time we are happy that you have been successful in completing your work here. On the whole, we are very proud of you and the accomplishments you have made, but as you leave us we would like to feel that you have gained a certain amount of know-how and the ability to apply it to some constructive and useful end. Sometime ago someone said about a certain person that he knew how to do much better than he did do. I think it has to be recognized that most of us know how to do things better than we do them. This is often due to conditions beyond our control; nevertheless, I hope that your training here will help you to do most of the things you may undertake as well as your knowledge and ability will permit. And, now as you leave us to go on to other achievements, I want to wish you the very best of everything that life has to offer.

Cordially yours,

Superintendent of Schools
